The Great Wall, Beijing

Hello, friends. I went to China last year. I visited the Great Wall in Beijing. It was amazing. It's more than forty thousand li long. And it's more than two thousand years old. There were lots of people everywhere. Then I ate Beijing Roast Ducks (北京烤鸭). They were delicious. I really love China.

1. Where did Simon go last year?
2. What did Simon do in Beijing?
3. What did Simon eat?
4. How did he feel?
